「Queen of the Night – The One Bloom」

Atelier Seiran

We work each day in close dialogue with Awa Ai.

The color of Awa Ai subtly changes depending on the condition of the vat, temperature, and humidity; the same blue never appears twice. Recognizing the right moment is an essential part of our process.

In batik dyeing, the type of wax, its temperature, and the nature of the fabric influence the formation of cracks and stretches, shaping the final expression. We engage with this element of chance as part of our creative practice.

While inheriting the founding vision of Yoko Hashimoto, we continue to move toward contemporary forms of expression.

We study traditional Japanese patterns, grasp their essence, and reinterpret them into new designs.

At the same time, we pursue new directions, including the fusion with 3D expression, collaboration with kana calligraphy, and cultural dialogue with Africa.

Through each accumulation of these processes, we draw out the inherent power of Awa Ai and give it form.

● Artist Statements

Hatsuko Ukigawa

"For me, having engaged with indigo alongside my work in the IT field, this exhibition represents a unique opportunity where technology and culture, as well as the present and tradition, intersect. It is a great honor to introduce the world of Awa indigo—cultivated over many years by my mother—on an international stage such as the Venice Biennale."

Kiyoko Hashimoto

"I am truly delighted to present my indigo-based expressions, developed in Tokushima, on the historic stage of Venice. Through this work, I aim to create an immersive, spatial experience inspired by the world of waka poetry. The flowing lines of kana calligraphy drift through the space like an invisible fragrance, while the indigo-dyed textiles evoke the presence of branches and blossoms as expanding forms. By integrating calligraphy and dyeing as a unified practice, I seek to explore new dimensions of spatial expression."

● A Collaborative Exhibition with Serge Mouangue

Fissures of Light focuses on the creative light that emerges from the fissures of culture and history.

Africa and Japan—two distinct traditions—share a deep respect for nature and a memory rooted in community.

This collaborative exhibition is not merely a partnership; it is an attempt for civilizations to move beyond opposition, generating dialogue through their fissures and guiding a light toward the future.

If the solo exhibition represents “depth,” this collaboration represents “expansion.” Only when grounded in an inner spirit can dialogue truly take meaning.

Serge Mouangue

Born in Yaoundé, Cameroon, he later moved to Paris and studied applied arts and industrial design at ENSCI.

After training under architect Glenn Murcutt, he joined the Renault–Nissan Alliance design team in Tokyo, working on concept car design.

In 2008, he founded WAFRICA, exploring the fusion of West African and Japanese aesthetics; his kimono works using African wax fabrics have received international recognition.

In 2011, he was selected as a TED Fellow.
